Fereign exchange was steady at 109% a 3% for bankers' sering at sixty days and 110% a 3% at abort sight. The apperts have for a long time been so light that the satisfies are but scantily supplied with foreign merchance, and it is therefore argued that an active revival of ar import trade must soon take place, which will materially increase the demand for exchange, while it will ave the good effect of increasing the gold revenue edged for the payment of the interest on the maded dabt. The contours receipts at this port-The customs receipts at this port and of June, 1864, to the end of 1865—a period of nine months—were only 1865 against $56,357,810 for the corresponding The currency value of the exports, exclusive of specie, was $175,656,218 against $120,679,000 for the same time in 1863-6; but much of, if not all the increase, is traceable to the rice of prices consequent upon depreciation of the currency. During the war our foreign trade has, atike with our shipping interest, suffered severely, but the tendoncy of peace will be to restore it. It is a mistaken idea that but it is a very general one, as the non-importation movement among the ladies, who hoped to be able to turn paper dollars into gold by leaving off wearing French siks and taking kindly to Merrimac prints, testified a reas ago. The government is dependent upon its cus-oms' reas ipts for $64,016,631 annually—that being the toms' receipts for $64,016,631 annually—that being the amount of the interest on the gold bearing debt already registered; and with the conversions of seventhirty notes, commencing within two years and a half, this sum will by largely increased. The present unskilfully framed farm will, before that time have to give place to a better constructed and more productive schedule, for many of the duties under the existing law are little less than prohibitory, and in some cases entirely so. The internal revenue taxes show equal ignorance of political economy on the part of Congress and the Treasury Department, and stand in urgent need of revision, seeing that the revenue from the list of July, 1864, to the list of April, 1865, was only $159,164,846, and that it will probably fall short of $159,164,846, and that it will probably fall short of two handred millions for the fiscal year ending with June next. The system of collecting the revenue is at the same time ridiculously inefficient, enormously being now practically at an end, the government is prompt to order a reduction of expenditures; but for a very long time to come these are likely to be far in ex-cess of the receipts. Meanwhile the payment of arrears to troops, contractors and others will cause an active drain upon the Treasury coffers for all the money it can raise by taxes and loans, and thus an easy money market expensive, and not wholly free from the suspicion of

At the next meeting of Congress the question of the sances will be likely to engross more attention than it as hitherto received, and for several years it will assume a greater prominence and importance than it has, perhaps, ever had in any country. It will be the rock upon which political parties will split. The republicans, for instance, who chiefly own the debt, will be firm in their determination to levy heavy taxes to meet the interest upon it, while the democrats, with the people of the South, may be clamorous for throwing off much of the burden of taxation by advocating some such measure as a reduction of the rate of interest. The next Congress, and to still more determine the suc-cooling Presidential election. But in any event, if we fail in accuring heavy taxatlon, it is easy to estimate the future of our finances. Of course nothing can retard the growing prosperity of rican people to carry about with them all their lives the distributed burden of a national debt which will aggre-

The general recovery in quotations will have the effect of restoring credits that were tottering to a sounder basis, and repairing the injuries inflicted by the gold panic, which proved the precursor of the capture of Richmond and the colleges of the rehal confidence of
